BROOKLYN, 2; NEW YORK (N. L.), O.

Excitement and uncertainty reigned every minute at Washington Park yesterday afternoon during the conflict between the Brooklyns and New Yorks. There was more excitement and uncertainty than scoring. the Brooklyns scored twice and the New Yorks not at all. In consequence the Brookyn partisans were able to relax into a state of contentment when the last New Yorker gave up the ghost. The crowd was so big ale of grand stand seats be stopped some me before the contest began. The presi ient had his hands full pacifying those who came late and wanted to get into the grand stand and couldn't. The grand stand and most of the other stands were packed, which was not without its benefits, for the wedging together of the cranks helped rotect them from a penetrating wind. Napoleon Rucker pitched fine ball with men on bases. His efficiency in pinches Ten of the Giants were eft on the sofas, two of them in the seventh inning and two in the ninth. Nap stood up there with iron nerve when it looked as if forces were crumbling and pitched his way out of holes that looked deep enough engulf him. His support wasn't as stanch s New York's, but just the same it too elped blank the Giants, for there were several corking fielding plays at sqaully mes by the Brooklyns.

The New Yorks were without Doyle all of the time and Bridwell part of the time.

Herzog, who slipped up on three different chances to bat in runners, struck out, and Schlei, becoming palsied between second and third, was run down and doubled up.

There were more feverish doings in the sixth. With one out Murray singled and stole second. Bergen's throw was poor and Murray went on to third. He came home, in fact, as Sebring's return of the bail hit Umpire Truby and Lennox was prevented from stopping the bail. The Brooklyns let out a terrible yelp and Umpire Rigler sent Murray back to third base. There he stayed while Tenney and O'Hara fanned. In the second half of the same palpitating round Hummel led off with a hit. Sebring jostled hard to right, but Hummel, not knowing whether the ball would be forced out by Murray's throw fo Bridwell.

Devin walked in the seventh and was forced by Buildwell.

to be forced out by Murray's throw to Bridwell.

Devlin walked in the seventh and was forced by Bridwell. Schlei hit safely and Meyers outfooted an imfield hit. Three on bases and only one out. But what cared the imperturbable Rucker? Nothing whatever. He sliced the plate with three that Herzog couldn't find and Alperman tossed out Fletcher. In the eighth hits into Murray's domain by Alperman and Hummelboth doubles—sent Alperman home. Murray apparently misjudged the second hit or else the wind confounded him. Devlin was the first private up again in the ninth and again walked. Schaefer but him on second with a base hit and both moved up when Rucker made a wild throw to second trying to snare Devlin. Schleichopned to Rucker and Devlin was collared between third and home. McCormick scraped the sky with a foul which Tim Jordan raked in out of the blue and Herzog, the last hope, pierced the ethereal with a foul which on the december of the second of the second the second the statement with a foul which on the second with a last hope, pierced the ethereal with a foul which on the second of the se last hope, pierced the ethereal with a li which on its descent was swallowed up Bill Bergen. NAVY CREWS WIN.

N. Y. University and the Arundels Outrowed at Annapolis.

ANNAPOLIS, April 24. - In the opening boat race of the local season the Naval Academy crew won decisively from the eight of New York University this afternoon. was over a course of a mile and a half, and not only did the first crew win over the New Yorkers by ten lengths but the third Navy crew, which was matched with the Arundels Baltimore crew, finished six lengths to the good of the visitors.

For a mile the New York varsity crew made a hard struggle. The superior phy-sique and training of the mid shipmen told toward the ending of the struggle and both crews rapidly increased the open water which separated them from the visiting crew. which separated them from the visiting crew. At the mile point the Arundels were something over a length ahead of the New Yorkers. The race was rowed on the outer course, which is Annapolis's harbor, which has not been used for several years. Conditions to-day, however, made it possible, and the finish was opposite the academy sea wall, affording a better opportunity of the spectators seeing the end. The race was delayed for twenty minutes at the start, as Magruder of the Navy third crew broke an oar and a launch had to be sent to the boathouse to bring another.

The third Navy crew rowed in bad water, but worked out of it at the breakwater off mile point and rapidly edged up on the first crew. The first Navy crew rowed at 28 strokes throughout and there was no doubt of the outcome after the first hundred yards. The New Yorkers showed a higher stroke but with much less power and dash. They saw the New Yorks overwhelm the Washingtons, the home team cornering all the runs there were, of which there were seventeen. Joe Lake and his support were plenty to see to it that the Washingtons didn't make any runs, while the New Yorks herded men across the rubber in recurring platoons. It was the worst beating handed to a big league team so far this year.

There was none of the dignified reserve of the opening day among the spectators. The earnest and capable playing of the Highlanders on the first day brought the crowd up yesterday to root for them with all restraint removed, and the New Yorks thing for the rooters to enthuse over. Four runs was the first course, and in alternate innings the New Yorks gourmandized on

The crack pitcher Walter Johnson, who had so far recovered as to warrant Cantillon sending him to the throne. The star who shut the New Yorks out several times last year was a shining target for them this time. He had speed enough, but lack of practice was plainly evident in his want of control. He couldn't put the ball where he *Batted for Taylor in the ninth inning.

and he has now to play Conklin, who has heen beaten once. Dr. Mial, although he has played some beautiful billiards, has not won a game. He has yet to play Jackson. Wright made a new high average of 16 18-24. His best work up to this time had been 16, which he made in the opening game of the tournament. Dr. Mial too made a good average, which is the next best to Wright's in the tournament.

There is a prize for the best average and there is a prize for the high run. At present Mayer of Philadelphia has made the best high run, 86, but in the game yesterday both Wright and Mial gave the Philadelphian a scare. Wright once ran 85 and then missed through not chalking his cue and Mayer laughed and applauded heartily. Later Wright ran 82, and toward the end of the game Dr. Mial ran 74. Mayer is much concerned about that run and he watches the games closely and his actions cause much fun.

Harvard Defeats Stevens. The Harvard lacrosse team defeated the Stevens twelve at Castle Point field yesterday afternoon after a close game by the score of 3 goals to 2. Owing to a slippery field the passing by both teams suffered, but good work on both sides in carrying the ball down the field and some excellent stops by Naef and Goepper made the contest exciting. Harvard was the first to score. Five minutes after play began R. P. Smith sent in a pretty shot from the side. This goal was followed by one from MacDonald's stick, who tied the score on a long shot. The visiting team went into the lead when S. Smith caged the ball after repeated shots at Stevens's net. What proved to be the last goal for Harvard was made by Alexander just before the close of the first half. Stevens resorted to long shots which proved to be uniformly unsuccessful. In the second period of play the home team braced up and Drinkwater scored unassisted after three minutes of play. From then on both twelves played hard, Harvard bringing most of the men down on the defence. test exciting. Harvard was the first to aroused every one, apparently the struggle for the point championship was paramount. From the start no other regiment had the slightest chance with the Thirteenth, the double hoodoo number working wonders for the Brooklynites. The Twenty-second Regiment, last year's champions, were unlinky at every stage, though they rallied bravely toward the close. M. W. Sheppard, who was the mainstay of the Twenty-second last year, was absent and a great loss to the team.

In the total score of the night the Thirteenth beat the Twenty-third by 22 points. The Twenty-second was third, and the other regiments finished in the following order: Fourteenth, Seventy-first and Sixty-ninth. The total score was: Thirteenth Spenies of the team.

The 100 yard run championship was productive of some good sprinting—that is from a military standpoint. Joe Kelly expects to play the outfield all season for Toronto and to be in good shape as soon as there is enough settled weather to get in shape. It lant time yet to praise the Highlanders as a strong team any more than it is to condens them as a weak team. We shall have a better ide of their strength when they have been through a Western series. What they have done so far is encouraging.
